Installation Instructions For ARB Bull Bar Defender 90

When installing an ARB Bull Bar on Defender 90's equipped with automatic transmissions, it will be necessary to trim the inside mounting tabs on the Bull Bar. A trial fit, prior to trimming, will show that the transmission cooler line between the frame horns of the D-90 interferes with the inside mounting tabs. By trimming the tabs to match the illustration, there will be ample room for proper alignment of all the remaining bolt holes. Some measuring will be required to determining the length of cut "A".

Note: After trimming, an alternate bolt hole will not be necessary, but can be added at the installer's discretion.
